

There are a lot of confidential items that are sent via email. I would be an invasion of privacy and I would stop using email. I would switch my communications to a encrypted peer-to-peer program to exchange communications which could not read even if it were tapped because I would use encryption grades higher than what even the military uses. So, there you just mandated everyone to use encrypted protocols over the internet which you will not be able to understand. This is again one of those laws where people who know nothing about computers are making laws for computers. You are really starting to make people really upset in the information technology community.
